Actor Bio:

Dylan Brown
SAG-AFTRA, AEA

DYLAN is a native of Atlanta, an aquarius, and has been known to dance a mean Charleston.

Born to a rock drummer dad and a ballerina mom, Dylan starting dancing at three, acting at six, and hasn't slowed down since.

Through middle school and high school, Dylan was an avid instrumentalist and tackled nine different instruments. She performed with her clarinet all over various Massachusetts and Connecticut bands, symphonies, and orchestras. In recent years, she has played woodwinds in pits for New York University's musicals. She briefly attended Berklee College of Music to study voice.

After high school, Dylan attended the University of the Arts in Philadelphia for musical theater. She transferred to New York University for sophomore year to study with Tisch School of the Arts (New Studio on Broadway first graduating class, Atlantic Theater Company, Stonestreet Screen Acting Workshop).

Dylan is a writer of short films, comedy sketches, indie pop music, and grocery lists.
She is also a proud member of Actor's Equity Association and the Screen Actors' Guild.
